The Notaboy is wondering what the dress code for your shindig is. He says if neither of you are doing the long white dress, he's got one he can wear.

Funny you should be playing that song. My first thought was, "Oh, people should dress as they please." Until I remembered we're talking about Erik. And suddenly I heard, "We need to talk / About the wedding cake and the wetsuit." g

Tell him he should be as beautiful as he wants, as long as he doesn't upstage the Guests of Honor. And since he knows I can be pretty easy to upstage, that kind of gives him a range to work in.

(And remember this long ago post of mine? If I can in any way contribute to an increase in the number of boys or Notaboys who dress like that, I will feel I've done the world a good turn.)

For the champagne corks, of course!

T.'s mom called to ask if she could wear red. Mygawd, where does this stuff come from? Why shouldn't she wear red? She looks gorgeous in red, and it's happy and festive. If people want to wear black, why shouldn't they? Everybody looks great in black.

P.S. I would have thought black was more his color. (T. says, "It's after Labor Day!")

T. is wearing a gray and lavender dress with a matching handpainted silk gauze formal wrap thingy with tiny violet beads and almost-as-tiny flowers. I am wearing a tux, though she's trying to talk me into a skirt instead of the trousers. I told her I would wear a lace shirt so people would know I was a girl, and besides I was letting you turn me into a redhead.*

So don't go buying it for yourself.

I might even let you borrow it sometimes. That is, if I were to have one.

Birthday, birthday, who's got the birthday?

Oh, she's not so bad. That space alien in the cape has turned her head, is all.

When I decided to be born in February, I must not have realized I'd own a motorcycle. Winter storms play hell with...

Technically speaking, a morning coat is not a tuxedo.

It's much nicer than a tuxedo.

(As her bridesmaid, I went with her to pick it out. Just you wait until she takes the coat off to dance. What she's calling a "shirt" is a sleeveless, shoulderless, bare-back halter blouse with a lace jabot. There may be traffic accidents if she steps outside for a breath of air.)

Aw. I want to take three years off your life, so that had better be figurative.

I mean, I haven't seen the waistcoat yet. But the same person who painted T.'s wrap is doing it, painted to match on lavender-gray silk. I hope it doesn't look goofy with the shirt... No, it won't. And I might even be able to wear it to work!

As long as you don't let Platypus do your hair and makeup for the ceremony.

I am so into dressing Gail, it's embarrassing. Like freakin' paper dolls.

...Is this creepy? I mean, she's sleeping with my notaboyfriend.

Which means she has good taste. And I think he has good taste, because, hey, after all, me. But also, her, because if I were him, I would totally sleep with her...

This is so complicated.

Hey, she's probably somewhere going, "She's sleeping with my notaboyfriend. So I know she has good taste--"

I'm home. San Diego was beautiful. Wedding was lovely except for the part where it was marred by parental histrionics, but I earned several years off any assigned time in purgatory by welding myself to Liz's (widowed) mother-in-law for the duration. She tried to pick me up. We did not explain why this was funny.

Can somebody bring me a large chocolate cake, some pizzas, and three bottles of cheap red wine, preferably in bottles with straw coats? Also a selection of John Belushi movies and a certain amount of help eating it all would not be unwelcome.

It's always nice when that happens. I've long said that I take my husband's consistent good taste in girlfriends as an indirect compliment to me. grin

Honey, if you're dressing her to take her to your friends' wedding, and she's cool with this, then you are doing really well.

As for complicated, trust me, you ain't seen nuthin' yet. Ask me sometime about the household of five I once dated, or the guy with whom I had a mutual attraction, and I had to get his wife's okay, and their wife's okay, and then even when I'd done that, the girl I was not-quite-dating got to sleep with him first, and the drama that she subsequently caused...
